Waxes Eloquent on the Strength and Weakness of Cleveland.

Dr. Chauncey M. Depew was just going to his breakfast this morning when an Evening WORLD reporter called on him to get his views in reference to Mr. Cleveland's nominadon. Dr. Depew was not yet aware of the nomination, and when a copy of THE EVENthe details, was handed to him, he gave expression to a "Well, well, well—that is news, ndeed!"

"However," he added, "I am not in the east surprised. I predicted this result more than a year ago. I said at that time that Harrison and Cleveland would be rival candifates during this campaign.

What do I think about Cleveland's strength as compared to that of Hill in New York? Well, those great expert Democratic State and city bosses, Flower, Sheehan-Murphy and Croker, ought to know, I supand they claim that Cleveland cannot carry this State. It is not for me, a Republican, to contradict them. An expert politician's analysis of a State problem ought to carry about the same weight as the analysis of a stilled chemist in matters chemical.

"If I hold any view of the subject, differing from that of those gentlemen, it is that both Cleveland and Hill are about equally weak in a certain sense, in the State of New York. There is a Mugwump element, 20,000 strong, which will vote for Cleveland and which Hill could never have commanded, while, on the other hand, there is a soldier element of from 10,000 to 20,000 votes which Hill would have got, and which is opposed to Cleveland.

"If Cleveland is elected you may set it down as certain that the Democratic State machine will be changed. Hill's political life will be ended. I like Mr. Hill personally, and it is natural that I should wish that this evil should not befall him. The very contemplation of the possibility of Hill sinking into his political gravo raises a tear to my eye. Do you see it?" he asked laughingly. There was more of a wink than a tear in his eye.

"Another result of Cleveland's election would be the substitution of William C. Whitney, assisted by ex-Secretary Fairchild, as State boss, instead of Hill.

"My eloquent friend, Bourke Cockran, the orator of the present machine, would be delivering dirges over the ingratitude of republics, while Mr. Frederic R. Coudert would assume the role of municipal Demosthenes and herald to a listening universe the triumph of Cleveland and Reform.

"You may also record that while the Democracy is thus making a spectacle of itself the columns of Harrison and Reid will march to victory."

At this point Dr. Depew finished his breakcarry this State. It is not for me, a Republ

"You wait!" said the veteran.

At that moment the door opened again, and the steward came in as deferential as before, but beaind him, keeping step to gether, strode six stalwatt saltors, any two of whom could have taken Bounce and done what they pieased with him, big as he was. The saitors with him, big as he was. The saitors with imperturbable of the nam from Canfornia.

The steward, in exactly the same tone of voice as he had addressed Joseph Bounce before, said:

"The purser would like to see you, sir, for a few moments."

There was stead stlenge in the smoking-room, and the bravest held his breath for time. Tounce locked over his shoulder room, and the bravest held his breath for a time. Founce tooked over his shoulder for a moment at the motionless men and then at the steward. His face was flushed with figure, but he was not so drunk that he did not realize the situation. There was a short pause; then Bounce said in a more sober voice:

"All right; Fill go with you."

He went, with the six men marching quietly behind him. What transpired at the interview no one knew, but it soon became known that Bounce's supply of liquer had been cut off and that he was practically under arrest during the rest of the veyage.

Joseph Bos ce had felt the touch of the hand of steel.
